BALKAN BLAZE

The 4th London Festival of Bulgarian Culture opens with an unmissable one-off musical conflagration

Sparks fly as Nigel Kennedy's violin collides with Georgi Andreev's Bulgarian gudoulka fiddle. The London Bulgarian Choir's raw folk harmonies swirl around the sophisticated precision of the Philharmonia Orchestra. Soloists Vania Vatrlova-Stankov and Dessislava Stefanova bewitch you with their powerful, glorious voices.

The British-Bulgarian Society celebrated its Diamond Jubilee in 2012.

It is a non-political organization which aims to promote understanding and cultural relations between the people of Britain and Bulgaria.

It runs a programme of special interest tours to Bulgaria, including:

- birdwatching
- butterflies
- wine and food
- folklore festivals
- archaeology

Proceeds from the tours are donated to a variety of conservation and educational projects.

The Society also organizes social and cultural events.

LIFESTYLES AND STILL LIFE

Exhibition opened from November 3 until November 27

Exceptionally staged and promising a cornucopia of gastronomic and visual experiences, the still life is a projection of social and lifestyle yearning. Each and every object is there in order to fill the viewer's eye with desire, every time, eternally, and to thus give weight to a constant sense of wellbeing and comfort. This vision is also a picture, created by the picture itself, the reality of which exists to remind us of the physical and material transience, which the act of consuming attempts to postpone every day.

ABOUT THE GALLERY

LUBOMIROV / ANGUS-HUGHES is a charitable organisation dedicated to contemporary curation. We see curators as localised experts in a global and increasingly complex contemporary art world. Since 2010 we have worked with a diverse set of curators, aiming to thus present a wider picture of art today and to engage the public in dialogue about and through art. We also invite curatorial projects by artists, art critics, collectors, gallerists, academics and other members of the art world, who both wield influence in the shaping of new art and have a uniquely valuable perspective on current and future state.

Decision acc to F.D. of the Sofia City Court

BBCF has been founded and registered by D. Gamalova in 2005 in memory of the distinguished Bulgarian violinist Blagorodna Badeva who died very young from diabetes. The funds are raised mainly via charity concerts of the founder, other charity events and personal donations. The Foundation is helping young Bulgarian musicians, violinists in particular, by means of scholarships, awards, free lending of musical instruments and creating performing opportunities in the form of small concerts in social homes. The second aim of the Foundation is to help children and young musicians suffering with diabetes.

Donations from charity events are counted in front of at least one witness, documented and later paid into the Charity account in Bulgaria.

Exhibition dates: 13-18 December 2016

Gallery opening times: Tuesday to Sunday 2 to 8pm

Haloclines is a unique form of solo exhibition by artist, curator and gallerist Iavor Lubomirov. Through collaborations with six artists, Lubomirov explores the boundaries between his sculptural practice and other art forms such as painting, photography, print, and drawing, while also in this way pondering his own mixed role as both artist and curator and the conflicts and synergies that arise from this. In this exhibition, large paintings and multiple sets of photographs, become art materials for Lubomirov, as he finely cuts and reassembles them into sculptural forms, while his work in turn becomes a surface or geometric outline another artist. Featuring Katrina Blannin, Abigail Box, Lee Edwards, Rab Harling, Valeriya N-Georg, Lee Maelzer.

ABOUT IAVOR LUBOMIROV

Iavor Lubomirov was born in Sofia, Bulgaria in 1978 and lives and works in London, UK. He is an artist, curator and gallerist. Together with William Angus-Hughes, Iavor Lubomirov directs the LUBOMIROV / ANGUS-HUGHES Centre for Contemporary Curation in East London.
